- Go into the address book application.
- Create as many groups as you want. The names of the groups appear in the Group view on the web interface/-application settings
- Assign the groups with specific rights to your mobile web server applications
- To make this feature work, you must assign your contacts in the address book to the specific group you defined.
- And with this little and few steps you manage as many contacts as you want with specific rights to your mobile web server applications.
- The corresponding apache groups.txt-file are automatically updates by the native mobile web server programs in the background. That's very cool and fine! Thanx to Nokia for this easy to handle group management.
