

Is there a reason for the special format used in naming this page? It seems to be causing problems with internal linking...

Ltomuta

Just an ordinary page. Is it the upstream links ie. the position in the list. Another thing if you search for the word Vista this document does NOT come up in the search list, some words do but not a title link.

Ok, I've changed the name to "Moving to Windows Vista" and now the search problem is solved. I am sure linking works also.

Ltomuta 04:40, 11 October 2007 (UTC)

After It took me some time to understand the value of this page I realized that the structure was... strage. I tried to improve this and took out the section describing some of the different windows versions. I hope you don't mind Noleti 17:13, 26 October 2007 (UTC)

A greate article. Follow its advises strictly and you'll defeat Vista & Symbian ugly coalition

Guys! Great thanks for this very useful article.

Installing Symbian SDK and running applications on Windows XP is quite easy, it does not give panic(problem) to run application. However installing Symbian SDK and running application on(emulator) Window Vista is bit difficult. If i remember correctly then audio driver is one main culprits, among others, to create panic in application.

This article describes different patch that need to follows to develop application on Window Vista machine. If you are planing developing application on window vista machine, than must read this article carefully.

--kamlesh sangani 11:41, 6 September 2009 (UTC)
